Cassie Wilcox, MS, OTR L of Children's Therapy Network
As the public's knowledge of sensory processing challenges grows, parents and childcare providers have begun to understand that there is no "one size fits all" approach to caring for children. Some challenging behaviors are influenced by the typical development of establishing independence and learning, social negotiation and boundaries. Meanwhile, other negative behaviors are rooted in disorganization of the nervous system and require a very different approach. How do we know when it's "behavior" versus "sensory?" Join us for a two-hour training to learn more about this topic. Participants will walk away with an understanding of how to identify the root cause of a child's behavior and how to best respond with effective behavior modification methods. Written materials will be provided as well as the opportunity for hands-on experience to better understand why a child might behave the way they do.

Last Bids for Silent Auction!

This is an exciting opportunity to tour one of Verona's new early childhood programs! Goddard School recognizes that each child is unique with their own learning style. The F.L.E.X. Curriculum provides individualized instruction for each child. It's the happy, playful and friendly atmosphere at Goddard that builds confidence and compassion in young children who need to gain problem-solving skills so vital for the 21st Century Learner.

Salman has a BS in Engineering and Masters in Business Administration and worked in the healthcare IT industry for over a decade before moving into real estate development and childcare. Mawara has a doctorate in Pharmacy. Salman and Mawara are raising two children of their own who also attend The Goddard School. They are a big reason for Salman and Mawara to start the preschool.
